The Role of Locomotives in New Railway Projects

Locomotives serve as the operational backbone of modern railway systems, supporting efficient, reliable, and sustainable transport networks. This webinar explores their role in enhancing environmental compliance and network capacity in new railway developments, particularly within expanding urban infrastructure. Participants will gain insight into the use of locomotives for site works during the project stage, as well as for operation and maintenance after project handover. The webinar will also cover key considerations in preparing specifications for the procurement of new locomotives, with reference to the Tung Chung Line Extension (TUE) and Northern Link (NOL) projects.
